St. Louis, MO / (314) 444-7791

Brendan Horton advises individuals, families, and business owners on estate planning, trust and estate administration, and business succession and transition planning.

Brendan is an associate in the Trust & Estates Department. He concentrates his practice on developing and implementing comprehensive estate plans, including gift, estate, and generation-skipping transfer planning. Brendan regularly advises individuals, families, and business owners on business succession and transition planning, helping align estate strategies with clients' long-term personal and financial goals.

Brendan also manages probate and trust administration matters from start to finish and prepares federal and state gift and estate tax returns. In addition, Brendan assists clients with business formation and provides guidance on entity structure and governance as part of an integrated approach to estate and business planning.
