Evan Reid represents clients in complex commercial litigation and government investigations, offering strategic counsel in high-stakes disputes involving health care, securities, and antitrust matters.

Evan concentrates his practice in the areas of complex commercial litigation and the defense of government investigations and white collar criminal cases. He represents individuals and companies—including doctors, business executives, health care facilities, and large corporations—under investigation or prosecution by state or federal authorities. Evan is particularly experienced in matters involving health care, securities, and antitrust, and he assists clients in conducting internal investigations and audits to identify and address compliance concerns.

His commercial litigation practice regularly involves defending against claims brought under the False Claims Act, antitrust laws, securities regulations, fraud statutes, and contract disputes, often in the context of class actions. His recent litigation successes include securing a favorable, first-in-the-nation interpretation of a key provision of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act and obtaining an appellate decision that narrowly defined the responsibilities of private hospitals in Missouri regarding physician privileges.

Evan's practice frequently takes him into federal and state courts in Missouri, Illinois, and beyond, including appearances before the Supreme Court of Missouri, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Missouri Court of Appeals. He was selected for inclusion in Missouri & Kansas Rising Stars® in 2009 and by his peers for inclusion in Best Lawyers® from 2020 to 2026.
