St. Louis, MO / (314) 444-7690

Tyler Maetten represents clients in high-stakes commercial and class action litigation, as well as complex insurance disputes.

Tyler is an associate in Lewis Rice's Litigation Department, where he works closely with clients to evaluate risk, develop case strategy, and provide guidance throughout the legal process.

He brings a strategic, detail-oriented approach to litigation and is known for clear communication, strong analysis, and practical advocacy on behalf of his clients, whether in the courtroom or at mediation. His experience also includes managing large-scale discovery efforts and collaborating with e-discovery teams on matters involving extensive electronic records.

Before joining Lewis Rice, Tyler worked in insurance defense, where he focused primarily on high-stakes litigation and complex coverage disputes. This experience provides Tyler with unique insight into the insurance claims process and how to approach complex coverage issues. Tyler uses this background to counsel clients on how to navigate insurance-related issues and disputes that arise in litigation or the claims process.

Tyler also gained experience in federal agency work and civil litigation, giving him a strong foundation for navigating multifaceted disputes.
